USES OF DYNAMITE TAUGHT

Powder Company Makes Most Of Publicity Caused By Big Explosion.

DEMONSTRATE TO FARMERS

The Otic Farm Near Barrington Is Site Chosen Where Uses of the Explosive are to be Illustrated

If you've never farmed with dynamite, you can see what fun it would be.

The Du Pont de Nemours company this week, out near Barrington, is to give a demonstration that is part of a nation wide campaign to educate the farmer in the use of explosives, and to convince him that dynamite and all its irritable brothers and sisters are good people at heart and perfectly willing to be the hired hands of that most independent of mortals, the American farmer.

The national campaign planned is just a series of demonstrations like that planned at Barrington.

In addition to taking parties of farmers out to the place designated, the Otic farm, the company will explode its various farm dynamites and powders in stump pulling and other work and teach the Barrington farmers how to use and handle explosives.

In addition, also a regular feature, the company will show films of all the different types of explosives in a Barrington five cent theater, supplying the films free to the theater. The pictures will show dynamite and powder in the making, the boring for and placing of a charge in the ground, the rock or a stump, the explosion, correct and dangerous, and the after effects.

The movement is the most widespread one on record to teach the American farmer how to use explosives of all kinds, and how not to bite a chunk out of a stick of dynamite or warm it on a kitchen stove.

The explosion of the big powder mills at Pleasant Prairie in March, aroused the interest of the farmers of the middle west in explosives and the company is turning into good, round hard dollars, the advertisement which came freely and by the column and page to its products, when the mills, going up, shook seven states and set the world's record for artificially created explosions, the mill blowing up vying with some of the greatest natural or volcanic explosions recorded in everything but loss of life and damage.

INDOOR PICNIC AT THE NATIONAL DAIRY SHOW

Plans are on foot for a monster Milk Producers' Association Indoor Picnic at the International Amphitheatre, Union Stock Yards, Chicago, during the National Dairy Show, October 28-November 4, 1911. The Milk Producers' picnics held at Wheaton, Poplar Grove, and other Illinois points, have proved exceptionally successful, and the management of the Dairy Show and Secretary Greer of the Milk Producers' Association plan to have a monster picnic on one day during the Show.

The feature of the entertainment will be athletic contests, including running races for men, women and children for which valuable prizes will be offered.

If the deal goes through, admission to the Show to members of the Milk Producers' Association and their families, will be reduced to 25 cents on the day of the picnic.

ROUTE MUST BE COVERED

R. D. Mail Carriers Who Fail, Must Stand Reduction in Pay.

The postoffice department is becoming more stringent in requiring that all rural routes must be served in its entirety. Heretofore during the winter storms and the rainy weather in the spring, the carriers would not always make the entire route each day, and were allowed their regular pay, if they covered the greater part of their routes, after all reasonable attempts.

But now the department will make reductions in the carrier's pay upon any partial failure each day.

A reduction will be made in each partial failure in the following cases: Whenever the partial failure may be attributed to the condition of the carriers' stock or equipment, or is due to his failure in stormy weather or in time of high water or bad roads, to use every endeavor to serve his entire route by traveling every road available; when the failure is due to the lack of interest in the service or misconduct on the part of the carrier, sickness, or any personal nature to the carrier.

Upon reaching an obstructed point a stream which is unfordable or a bridge which cannot be crossed, he should make such deviation from the official line of travel as to avoid the obstruction. If this is not possible he must return immediately to the postoffice and start out in the opposite direction. Whenever, after leaving the postoffice, the carrier finds that he can't reach his route, he must travel some other roads, although they may be covered by another carrier, and make every endeavor to serve the patrons. The excuse that the roads are slippery or too hard to travel will not be considered, as each carrier must be equipped to serve his route under all conditions of roads or weather.

MAY EXTEND ELECTRIC

Would Purchase the W. R. & L. Traction and operate over Fox Lake Line

It is stated by some of the stockholders in the Waukegan, Rockford and Elgin traction company, the new owners of the old Waukegan, Fox Lake and Western railroad, would soon make efforts to take over that road and gain an entrance to Waukegan by means of the old Fox Lake line franchise.

Some time ago, the promoters of the Waukegan, Rockford and Elgin Traction company made strenuous efforts to gain a franchise for the entrance of their road into Waukegan, but their attempts failed, when the council refused to grant the petition presented.

The franchise of the Waukegan, Fox Lake and Western still has fifteen years to run, and it is thought that the new company will take over the Waukegan, Rockford and Elgin traction lines, and operate their cars over the Fox Lake tracks.

The officials of the Fox Lake line refused to make any statement as to their plans for the future of the road, but it was stated that it was thought that the Rockford and Elgin line would build to the city limits and then run into Waukegan over the Fox Lake franchise.

What effect this would have on the Chicago and Milwaukee electric is easily seen, when it is known that the tracks are necessary for that company for an entrance into that city.

ZION CASES STARTED OVER AGAIN

Under Argument for Change Of Venue All Voting Cases Were Dismissed

DADY SPRINGS A SURPRISE

New Information Against Same ones is Immediately Filed in the County Court

State's Attorney Ralph Dady sprung a little surprise Monday morning in the County court, when, with one sweep of his hand, he cleared the docket of the County court of every Zion City alleged illegal voting case and immediately started new proceedings in the same court against the entire 193.

The whole matter came up under a motion for a change of venue. Attorneys Field and Barnes of Woodstock for General overseer Voliva had prepared affidavits, both before Circuit Judge Charles Whitney and County Judge Persons. Attorney Field gained the permission for a change of venue before the Circuit judge, and as soon as he was through with his arguments in County court, State's Attorney Dady arose, and nolle prossed the entire 193 indictments in that court, and a few minutes later filed information against 193, the same ones who were named in the indictments returned by the special grand jury session in May.

This will clear the Circuit docket of all Zion election cases, except the election contest over the office of mayor of Zion City. The entire list of cases will now be heard before the county judge, one from some other county, as a change of venue will be asked in the new cases.

The cases in County court were taken into that court on transcripts from the Circuit court. One hundred and ninety-three indictments were returned by the special May grand jury and part were turned over to the County court to relieve the strain in Circuit court.

Today all were nolle prossed and new informations filed.

This will take about 140 cases off the docket of the Circuit court and will add the same number to the work of the County court.

A change of venue in the cases were granted in Circuit court by Judge Charles Whitney, but these cases in this court will not come to trial. A change of venue will also be asked in the entire list from Judge Persons, and it is thought that Judge DeVolf of Belvidere will sit in the cases which will be tried.

EIGHT CENT STAMPS ARE OF MOST TROUBLE

When a meek little man stepped up to the stamp window in a branch office and asked for an eight cent stamp he caused as much consternation as if he had demanded "your money or your life."

All the clerks came to the window to take a look at him. They muttered to one another and made strange and fantastic signs, crossed their fingers, knocked on wood and did various other things that are supposed to drive away evil spirits.

"We're just out of eight cent stamps," a clerk finally stammered. "Got lots of two and ones."

"Well, gimme a five and a three," said the meek little man, upon receiving which he paid for them and departed.

"What's the matter with the eights?" queried an inquisitive spectator.

The stamp clerk was still too nervous to answer, but one of the others said, with a smile:

"Eights are hoodoos. None of the small offices handle them if they can help it. It's this way: They are just a wee shade different in color from the ones and it is no infrequent thing for a stamp clerk in a hurry to hand out a lot of eights when ones are asked and paid for. It always costs him seven cents a stamp when he does it. The clerk here the other day, during the rush hour, when the offices are closing, was called upon for a dollar's worth of ones. He handed out a hundred eights instead. Cost him seven dollars. Then he got rid of all the rest of the eights and now he won't have anything to do with eights. Even says 'eaten' instead of 'eight'."

OCT. 28TH IS TO BE A BIG DAY

The Proclamation Issued Requests That Labor Stop During the Afternoon

IDEA MEETS WITH FAVOR

Ample Protection is Assured by Waukegan Police, Sheriff Green and his Deputies when Taft Comes

Whereas, At a meeting of the mayors, village presidents and supervisors of Lake county, Illinois, held at Waukegan, Illinois, Oct. fifth, 1911, a resolution was unanimously adopted making Saturday, October twenty-eighth, 1911, from twelve o'clock noon to six o'clock evening, a holiday for the purpose of attending the dedication exercises of the United States Naval Training Station, at which His Excellency, The Honorable William Howard Taft, President of the United States will preside.

Therefore, I earnestly request that all business houses and manufacturing industries close at twelve o'clock noon on the above date and with the citizens throughout Lake county attend the opening of the greatest and most complete naval training station in the world.

Let the day be a notable one for Lake county, and show your appreciation of the honor conferred upon the county by its selection as the location of this great institution, which has cost the United States government about four million dollars.

The foregoing was the proclamation that was issued Wednesday by Mayor J. F. Bidinger and without doubt will result in every wheel being stopped in Waukegan on the afternoon that the president makes his visit to the station.

The mayor of every city and village in the county has expressed a willingness to issue a similar proclamation and this action will be taken within a few days.

Mayor Bidinger Tuesday night met Mayor Howard of Lake Bluff and Mayor Sherwin of North Chicago, and they discussed plans for the entertainment of the president. In a few days they will meet Rear Admiral Ross of the naval school to find out positively just what part Lake county is to take in the celebration. It will be possible then to make plans in greater detail.

At the present time an effort is on foot to get President Taft to make an automobile trip to Waukegan. In case he does consent to this, and there are many who think he will, he will be given ample protection as the Waukegan police department, aided by Sheriff Green and his deputies from all over the county will be on hand to assist the president's personal guard. The Lake county men will prove invaluable because they know all suspicious characters and would be able to detect them before the president's secret service staff.

ELECTRICITY AS A WOOL GROWER

Prof. Silas Wentworth claims that on his experimental farm at Roseville, Cal., electricity has proved capable of doubling the production of lambs and greatly increasing the yield of wool. A flock of sheep was divided, one half being placed in a field under the power wires of an electric company, while the other portion was removed from electric influences. The fleeces of the sheep in the electrically influenced field were 20 per cent heavier and the lambs more than twice as numerous. This astonishing foreign office report suggests a new opportunity for investigation in our country, where the effect of electricity on vegetation has been for some time receiving attention. The time may yet come when there will be a ready market for cheap current in the service of agriculture.

GYPSIES PAY DAMAGES

Gypsies Will not Trouble This Section Again for Some Time to Come

In last weeks issue of the News there appeared an account of a nimble fingered gypsy securing a sum of money from aged Mr. Straghn, but up to press time the result of an attempt to regain the lost roll was not known. As there has been repeated inquiries about the affair, the sequel of the story is hereby given.

Marshall Hooper, enlisting the service of L. H. Feltr, Geo. Conrad and Chase McGuire who taking with them the old gentleman and his daughter, Mrs. Marshall, started in pursuit of the gang overtaking them just as they had crossed the line into Wisconsin, and then it was that the Antioch sleuths (so called) laid the foundation of the plot. Knowing that they had no jurisdiction in the state of Wisconsin they passed silently by the caravan and on into Wilmot where the really clever work began.

The victim and his daughter were hid in the kitchen of the hotel, the constable at Silverlake notified and the appearance of the "bunch" awaited. As they came into town and entered the hotel they were met by a jolly crowd (no other than our Antioch friends) who by having their fortune told and passing the ginger ale, entertained them so well that the two hours that elapsed ere the arrival of constable, Rudolph slipped rapidly away. Upon his arrival the members of the dusky tribe were lined up and Mrs. Marshall was asked to identify the guilty party, which she did easily enough, the identification being made complete when Mr. Straghn pointed out the same one although he was not present while his daughter was deciding upon the clever abstraction.

A procession was next formed and with Marshall Hooper in the lead and the "sleuths" in the rear a march was taken to Silverlake and the crowd brought up before Justice Blum, who when he learned that the amount taken exceeded $25 refused to act and it was then up to the "sleuths" to do a little bluffing, accordingly Feltr representing himself as an officer took charge of the proceedings. In the meantime the accused damsel strongly denying any theft, informed the party that if they would search the old gentleman the money would be found in his clothes, where it had been all the time.

A search revealed $20 of the $25.50, but the ruse failed to work as five witnesses had seen her slyly slip the roll into his clothes while arguing the matter. Feltr then looked wise and informed them that a settlement would be made for $27.50, $5.50 of which would go to make up the remainder of the amount stolen and the rest to be used in defraying the expenses. This they objected to but when they saw a possibility of being taken to Kenosha by the sheriff looming up before them they reconsidered, paid up and left, glad to be allowed to proceed on their way without further trouble.

ESTIMAT LOSS AT $2,000

Hydrophiu Epidemic is a Dear one for Lake County.

It is estimated that the recent mad dog scare in this county has cost the people close to $2,000.

The loss has been confined to the neighborhood of Gurnee, Wadsworth, Russell, York House and Zion City and is made up of horses, hogs, cattle and poultry, some of which died of rabies and some of which it was deemed necessary to kill.

Every effort is being made to check the spread of the disease and farmers are keeping a strict watch over their stock. The city of Waukegan is also included in the epidemic and a number of dogs suffering from the disease have been shot as well as others that were under suspicion or were known to have been bitten.

One man, a grocer by the name of Charles Steinkamp was bitten and has petitioned the city council to help him bear the expense of a course of treatment at the Pasteur Institute, and altogether matters have reached a crisis where Mayor Bidinger seeing that it was imperative that some decided steps must be taken has issued a proclamation in which he has ordered every dog owner in the city to see that the animal is tied up for a period of six weeks or until all evidence of the disease has disappeared.

The police were notified to see that the proclamation was enforced to the very letter and arrests will be made in case of violations.

SALOONMEN INDICTED BY JURY

Forgetful Witnesses Are Compelled to Refresh Memory During Probe

ASK INDICTMENTS QUASHED

Attorney George Field May be Selected to Defend the Whole Twenty-Nine Cases.

The Lake County grand jury late last Friday afternoon rendered a report in which forty-one indictments were returned, thirty-nine of the number being saloon keepers who were indicted on the charge of keeping their saloon open on Sunday.

These indictments follow closely upon an active prosecution conducted by State's Attorney Dady who subpoenaed to appear as witnesses many prominent business men. At first there was a strong tendency toward forgetfulness among the witnesses but that spell was broken through the fact that the state and grand jury had the "dead wood" on a number of them for potential alleged perjury, and with prison terms of from one to fourteen years looming up in the horizon, for those who might perjure themselves, a decided change of front was made, memories were refreshed and a complete story of the frequenting of the Sunday saloons was brought out.

A few still remained unwilling to remember certain facts and persisted in stating that although it was a fact that they had visited saloons on Sunday and bought drinks on that day since May, they were unable to recall the place and the date. These were kept on the string and given every opportunity to recollect before the perjury ax should fall.

Many a hot tilt was indulged in during the quiz as well as a generous amount of sarcasm. One instance is related where one witness when asked whether he had been in a saloon on Sunday within the past eighteen months, replied that he had and had taken a drink with the states attorney. "That's a lie," shouted Dady and if you'll come outside this jury room, I'll prove it to you.

Each of the thirty-nine saloon men involved in the affair are preparing to file a petition asking the court to quash each of the thirty-nine indictments. Claiming that the State's Attorney overstepped his rights by cross examining the witnesses before the grand jury. They will also petition the court to grant a change of venue.

George Field, attorney for Voliva, is the choice of the majority of the saloon men to act as their counsel. If he accepts he will be assisted by two Chicago lawyers.

Each of the twenty-nine appeared before Judge Whitney, Monday morning and furnished bonds for $300.

GYPSIES ARE FORCED OUT OF KENOSHA COUNTY

After a week of constant trouble Chief of Police O'Hare and Sheriff Andrew Stahl believe they have rid Kenosha county of the gypsy hordes. A cavalcade of forty wagons last week left Pleasant Prairie for the west taking in them more than 300 of the nomads. These included all of the members of the Bimble tribe and half a dozen other tribes who had gathered for the trial of the Bimble cases in the circuit court. Before the gypsies left the county they were forced to settle several claims for damages made by farmers in the neighborhood of the camp. They did not leave the county willingly and in fact for a time they declared that they would fight any effort on the part of the court or the officials to force them out, but when a half a dozen members of the tribe were threatened with arrested for petty offenses and when it was found that the sheriff was determined to put some of the women in jail the gypsies tore down their tents and prepared to leave.

There Were 986 Vessels That Went Down Last Year in the Sea, Say Statisticians.

Careful French statisticians compile each year for the Bureau Veritas a record of the accidents and losses suffered for a twelvemonth by the merchant marine of all nations from which data are obtainable. The yearly summary put forth by the Bureau Veritas is counted authoritative by all maritime men—owners, agents, underwriters. Few who loiter in the palm gardens or loiter on the roadways of the swift cities of ease that cross the Atlantic know the Bureau Veritas, its record of the toll gathered by that complacent sea down—far down—below the rails.

Nine hundred and eighty-six of the world's merchant marine—steam and sail—totally lost in the year 1908, say these careful French statisticians, and this tally recognizes only steam vessels of over 100 tons' burden. Such the record of complete destruction, and the following the count of damage not irreparable: Four thousand two hundred and seventy-three steamers injured by fire, collision, stranding, stress of weather and other causes. The destruction varies from year to year; in 1907 there were 1,104 total losses among merchant ships; in 1905, 1,038 steamships and sailing vessels were gripped by the sea—Robert Welles Ritchie, in Harper's Weekly.

Gen. Theodore A. Bingham, who resigned the post of chief engineer of New York's bureau of highways because he could get nothing accomplished, said the other day to a reporter:

"Despite all my efforts in that office, there were no results. I reminded myself—though in no invidious sense—of Gobsa Golde.

"Gobsa Golde, the well-known clubman, was found by a police officer, very late one night, in a pitiable state of intoxication. The wretched fellow stood beneath a lamp post, which he was kicking with might and main.

"Slightly amused, the policeman watched him a moment. Then he said:

"Here, sir, what are you doing there?"

"No reply. Only—bang, bang, bang—Gobsa dealt the lamp post three more kicks.

"What are you doing?" repeated the policeman.

"Gobsa delivered another quick volley of very furious kicks, and then, looking up, he said:

Paddling a Canoe to College.

Three young men in a boat, to say nothing of the rest of the outfit, are floating down the Mississippi river on a month's journey to St. Louis, where they will enter Washington university when the fall term opens, a little more than a week hence.

Paddling in a canoe to college is a novel manner to reach a destination in these days of rapid transit, but A. L. Partridge, A. Sider and E. Dixon have made the trip before and they think the rigors of a 1,000 mile trip by canoe is just the sort of thing to train them for a winter's study.

It was in the middle of August that the students began their long journey near the headwaters of the Wisconsin river. Their canoe was fitted out with everything needed on the long and arduous trip and experienced had taught them that their larder needed to be well stocked.—St. Louis Republic.

TURKEY APPEALS TO WHOLE WORLD; REVILES HER FOE

Telegram Is Sent to All Nations and Peace Societies.

ITALY RULES TRIPOLI

Admiral Is Appointed Governor and Other Powers Ask Him to Protect Foreigners—Ottoman Warship Is Sunk in Red Sea.

Constantinople.—At a meeting in the mosque of St. Sophia, a telegram of protest against Italy's declaration of war on Turkey was formulated and sent to all the parliaments of the world, peace and arbitration societies, universities, socialist organizations and The Hague peace tribunal.

The telegram says the occupation of Tripoli is unjustified and that Italy is unworthy of a place among the great powers. It asks whether western civilization has considered the effect upon the eastern mind of Italy's brigandage.

Italians Rule Tripoli. Rome.—An official statement issued says that the Italians have occupied the town of Tripoli. Rear Admiral Borea d'Olmo has been appointed governor of Tripoli. Further detachments of sailors with guns and mitrailleuses were landed and the military occupation completed without incident.

The German consul general informed Admiral Faravelli that no foreigners had been injured during the bombardment at Tripoli. Neither had any damage been done to their residences. Six Turkish soldiers and six Jews were killed and five soldiers and one Jew wounded.

Rear Admiral Borea d'Olmo is a distinguished naval officer and son of the tion of the Red sea says the Italian warship Aretusa attacked and seriously damaged the fortifications of Hodeida, a seaport of Arabia. It also sank a Turkish gunboat. A score of the crew of the latter were killed. Many others plunged into the sea and were rescued by boats from the Aretusa.

Prepare for Army's Start. The most elaborate preparations are being made for the embarkation of the army which is destined for service in Tripoli and Cyrenica, but the government is keeping the work as quiet as possible and news of the movement of troops is difficult to obtain. A cannon shot fired at Messina, Reggio di Calabria and Scilla, announced that civil law had come to an end for the time being and now every port in southern Italy and Sicily is under military rule.

A squadron of torpedo boats has left Naples to clear the way for the transports carrying the troops. The first of the troop ship division, of which there will be four, will leave Naples under command of General Caneva. Each division will comprise 15,000 men and will include two brigades of infantry, three squadrons of cavalry, and a regiment of artillery.

Official dispatches received here say: "The ships of the first Italian squadron entered the roadstead at Tobruk, in Bomba bay, where they found no Turkish warships.

"They summoned the garrison to surrender, but the Turks replied with a flat refusal and hoisted the Turkish flag. The battleship Vittorio Emanuele opened fire. The first shots carried away the flag and made a large breach in the fort.

"Rear Admiral Aubrey, commander-in-chief of the fleet, then landed several companies of marines, who overcame the resistance of the small Turkish force. The Italians occupied the fort. A few Turkish soldiers, who refused to abandon the fort without further fighting, were made prisoners.

The governor of Eritrea, the Italian colony in Africa bordering on the Red sea, has called out the native reservists. He has mobilized 20,000 men.

master of ceremonies at his majesty's court.

After Italian seamen had been landed and occupied Fort Sultanla the chiefs of the Arab tribes adjacent to Tripoli went aboard the Italian flagship and gave their submission. They begged the Italians not to resume the bombardment.

The German consul, as the senior member of the consular corps, also visited the flagship and asked Vice Admiral Faravelli to assume responsibility for the preservation of public order and the protection of foreign residents in Tripoli, which had been abandoned by the Turkish troops.

The cruiser San Marco, which has arrived at Agosta, reports that during the bombardment of Tripoli eight Turkish torpedo boats attempted with "incredible audacity" to attack the Italian battleships. The battleships fired two shells and sank two of the torpedo boats and the others fled. None of the Italian warships was damaged.

Tells of Naval Engagement.

An official statement issued says: "Fire was treacherously opened from San Giovanni di Medua, on the Albanian coast, upon an Italian vessel flying a white flag. The Italian destroyer Artiglieri, which was patrolling in the vicinity, replied with its guns in order to protect the Italian vessel. The destroyer was slightly damaged and its commander was wounded in the foot. The damage to the enemy is unknown."

HIT PAPER TRUST

U. S. GRAND JURY AT CLEVELAND INDICT EIGHT MEN FOR CONSPIRACY.

GOV. DIX'S PARTNER NAMED

Jobbers and Manufacturers Are Charged With Violating Sherman Anti-Trust Law and With Controlling Country's Wall Paper Output.

Cleveland, O.—Eight indictments against four wall paper manufacturers and four wall paper jobbers, members of the so-called "wall paper trust," charging them with a conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, were returned by the federal grand jury here.

The indictments were brought on complaint of a five and ten-cent store of Pittsburg. It is alleged that the men indicted, forming the executive committee of the jobbers' and manufacturers' organizations, met in Cleveland May 30, 1910, and entered into an agreement not to sell to five and ten-cent stores. This it was charged was in restraint of trade and contrary to the word and spirit of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Among the prominent men indicted is W. A. Huppuch, chairman of the New York state Democratic central committee, former manager of Governor Dix's political campaign and president of the state public service commission. He is president of the National Association of Wall Paper Manufacturers.

Chicago.—The international officers of nine different crafts are threatened with a costly legal suit following the interruption in traffic on the Illinois Central railroad, the rioting at McComb City, Miss., and the destruction of valuable records by clerks prior to going on strike.

Following the riot, agents of the company began the collection of evidence to be used in the prosecutions of strikers under the Sherman anti-trust act. Evidence is also being sought against striking railway clerks who are charged with destroying way bills and shipping orders at the Memphis and New Orleans offices of the company before they went on strike.

Six strike-breakers are now known to have been seriously hurt, one of them, named Haines, fatally, in the riots at McComb City. The strike-breakers were passing through on a train and 1,000 shots were fired into the cars. Lee Haley, a striker, was also killed by a bullet which the police claim was fired by his friends. About the time Haley was shot an explosion occurred near the car shops. This was followed by a number of shots. The explosive tore a hole in the ground, but no one was hurt.

Julius Kruttschnitt gave out a statement that many strikers had returned to work on the Harriman lines. Many new men were also employed. Officials of the Illinois Central stated that 40 per cent. of their usual force was at work and that no more men would be hired.

MUNYON PREACHES HOPE PHILOSOPHY

New Association Gaining Many Members.

FAITH'S CURATIVE POWER

NOTED HEALTH EXPERT GIVES REASON FOR BIG SUCCESS IN MEDICINE

Tremendous success has attended the organization of the new Munyon "Hope Cult." Professor Munyon claims that he has secured more converts than he even anticipated, and says that his "Hope Cult" is growing in leaps and bounds. It is said that the total membership of the association throughout the United States is now well over the half million mark.

In a statement for publication Prof. Munyon said:

"I want to expound the Great Truth that I have learned that there is more curative power in an ounce of Hope than in pounds of Drugs. That sick people should not take medicine except as a medium through which the great curative power of Hope may be made effective. Medicines are necessary in the present state of the world's progress because they give a patient physical support and strength and renewed vigor with which to brace up the will power. One knows from the action of the proper medicines that he or she is feeling better by this inspired hope and faith, which complete the cure.

"I think that probably a million persons at least in the United States have declared themselves cured by my medicines, and I know that these people have had the best remedies medical science had to offer. I have always contended that if there is any virtue in medicine, my followers should have the best, but I verily believe that more than one-half of those who have been cured by my medicines have been cured by the knowledge that they had the utmost in medical lore at their command, and the Hope this inspired.

"I am not in any sense a practicing physician. I employ at my laboratories in Philadelphia a large staff of expert physicians and chemists, and I have many other physicians in various cities of the United States detailed to give free advice to the sick and suffering. I have a staff of duty registered physicians and consulting experts, and to all who desire it I offer the best of medical advice absolutely free of charge."

Write today, addressing Prof. J. M. Munyon personally and your letter will have a special care.

Laughing Down a Whiner.

"The bluff, cheery optimism of Senator Frye," said a Lewistown divine, "could not brook a whiner. Once at a dinner here in Lewistown a whiner seated opposite Senator Frye said dolefully:

"I have only one friend on earth—my dog."

"Why don't you get another dog?" said Senator Frye.

130TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE SURRENDER OF CORNWALLIS

GREAT EVENT WHICH MADE INDEPENDENCE DAY A REALITY

By JOHN D. GRANT

THE great event of the Revolutionary war, the event that marked the end of despotic British rule in this country and made independence day a reality, is to be celebrated this year with a greater display of patriotic enthusiasm than is usual in the commemoration of great historic events in this country. The 130th anniversary of the surrender of Cornwallis will be observed at Yorktown, Va., on October 19 with an inspiring naval and military display. The country's greatest statesmen will participate in the exercises in which the lofty spirit of true patriotism will be the predominating feature.

The pretty little city of Yorktown is enshrined with many memories of this country's desperate struggle for liberty and of its final triumph. Buildings which figured prominently in the negotiations between Washington and Cornwallis, which practically resulted in ending the war, are still standing, preserved as monuments to the patriots who erected on this continent a free and independent commonwealth.

The downfall of Cornwallis, which also spelled the end of British hopes for retaining

NATIONAL MONUMENT AT YORKTOWN

NELSON HOUSE - CORNWALLIS' HEADQUARTERS DURING SIEGE

1740, was the home of Thomas Nelson, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, a governor of Virginia, and finally a major-general in the American army. This sturdy relic of many wars was the official headquarters of Lord Cornwallis as head of the British army during the siege of 1781. After the close of the war it marked the renewal not only of a friendship between soldiers, but the friendship of nations. The French and the United States were closely cemented together through the visit of General Lafayette to his old-time war friend, Major General Nelson.

Not in Circulation There. An error of a new clerk in the mailing department of an eastern publisher was responsible, the other day, for the mailing of a prospectus to a world-famous statesman, who had been dead for some years. The letter was returned a few days later with the following indorsement: "In Heaven, 1911. Gentlemen: As your publications are not permitted to circulate here, I believe it would be useless for me to subscribe for them. Yours respectfully," and here followed the name of the famous statesman.

All of 'Em Fans. A man little acquainted with the stage and its people went to see the "Frisars Frolic" and was surprised to find that the Cohans were Irish. He was talking to Tom Cavanaugh about it.

"Sure," said Tom. "They're fans." —Chicago Post.

A Superior Person. F. H. Elliott, the secretary of the American Automobile association, was talking about a somewhat supercilious and conceited millionaire. "He's a very superior person," Mr. Elliott said, smiling. "He's the sort of person who would be sure to go to a horse show in a motor car and to an automobile show in a monoplane."

FIRST CUSTOM HOUSE IN U.S. - AT YORKTOWN

the colonies under the sway of King George's tyrannical power, was brought about by the masterly tactics of General Washington. The American commander led his adversary to believe he intended to make an attack on New York. Cornwallis, completely fooled by the movements of the revolutionary army, was caught in a trap. Hemmed in on all sides, securely bottled up in Yorktown with communications and food supplies cut off, the British commander was forced to surrender.

Cornwallis' invasion of Virginia followed a long and unsuccessful campaign in North Carolina. The British general made up his mind that his exhausting labors there would prove unprofitable until Virginia was subjugated. On April 25, 1781, he started northward from Wilmington, N. C. He reached Petersburg, Va., May 20, and during the next two weeks attempted to capture Lafayette, who was in command of the small American forces for the defense of Virginia. Lafayette successfully evaded the British and, June 10, was reinforced by General Anthony Wayne with 1,000 infantry and six guns. The British commander so far forced in his objects, had to march back to Richmond and thence to Williamsburg, near the coast, thus practically abandoning control over any part of Virginia except where naval forces gave possession. Lafayette effected a junction with Baron Steuben on June 18, and thus increased his force to about 4,000 men. The Americans had now become the pursuers instead of the pursued, and followed the British, harassing their rear and flanks.

Soon afterward the British army concentrated at Portsmouth and preparations were under way to transport a considerable portion of it to New York, when Cornwallis received orders from General Clinton, the British commander-in-chief, to fortify Old Point Comfort at the present Fort Monroe, and if advisable, Yorktown. Obeying these instructions, Cornwallis ordered a survey of Old Point Comfort, but on the advice of his engineers was obliged to represent to Clinton that it was wholly unfit and inadequate for a naval station. Then, following what he believed to be the spirit of his orders, Cornwallis, before hearing from Clinton, moved up to Yorktown and began to fortify it in connection with Gloucester, on the opposite shore.

Meanwhile Washington and Rochambeau, with the allied French and American forces, were at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., menacing New York city and awaiting the arrival of the proposed French fleet under Admiral de Grasse. That officer wrote that he expected to sail for Chesapeake Bay on August 13, but that he could remain in American waters only a short time.

Washington, who had heretofore resisted entreaties to remove the army from New York to operations in the south, determined to cooperate with Admiral de Grasse in an attack upon Cornwallis. With about 4,000 French and 2,000 Continentals he started across New Jersey August 19, and by September 26 had joined Lafayette and additional Virginia militia under Governor Nelson at Williamsburg. The French fleet, September 6, defeated the British under Admiral Graves, and then held the Chesapeake to prevent British reinforcements. Washington took position before Yorktown September 28, and the night of the 29th Cornwallis abandoned his outer works before the town. The first of October finds our engineers reconnoitering the position and works of the enemy. The 2d witnessed the gallantry of the Duke de Lauzun and his legion in driving back the terror of Virginia and the Carolinas. On the 6th, the allied armies broke ground for their final parallel, and proceeded to mount their batteries on the 7th and 8th. On the 9th, two batteries were opened—Washington himself applying the torch to the first gun; and on the 10th three or four more were in play, silencing the enemy's works. On the 11th, the indefatigable Steuben was breaking the ground for our second parallel, within less than 400 yards of the enemy, which was finished the next morning, and more batteries were mounted on the 13th and 14th. But the great achievement of the siege still awaits its accomplishment. Two advanced British redoubts are blocking the way to any further approach, and they must be stormed. The allied troops divide the danger and the glory between them, and emulate each other in the assault. One of the redoubts is assigned to the French grenadiers and chasseurs under de Viomesnil. The other is assigned to the American light infantry under Lafayette. Both redoubts were soon captured and the fate of Cornwallis was sealed. "A small and precipitate sortie," as Washington calls it, was made by the British on the following evening, resulting in nothing. The next day a vain attempt to evacuate their works and to escape by crossing over to Gloucester was defeated by a violent storm.

At ten o'clock on the morning of the 17th of October, 1781, the British beat a parley, and Lord Cornwallis proposed a cessation of hostilities for twenty-four hours that commissioners might meet at the house of a Mr. Moore in the rear of the first American parallel. Washington replied with a grant of two hours' cessation, that terms might be proposed in writing. Finding their general tenor admissible, hostilities were suspended for the night, and Washington proposed his own terms. Commissioners were appointed, Colonel Laurens, the Vicomte de Noailles, and M. de Grandchain on the part of Washington; Lieutenant Colonel Dundas and Major Ross on that of Cornwallis. The 18th was consumed in negotiations, which Washington brought to a close by having the draft of the agreement copied, sending it on the morning of the 19th, and demanding that it should be signed by eleven, and the garrison march out at two o'clock.

Rochambeau describes the surrender: "The Americans and French took possession of the two batteries at noon. The garrison marched out at two o'clock between the two armies, drums beating, carrying their arms, which were stacked, with about twenty flags. Lord Cornwallis being ill, General O'Hara marched out at the head of the garrison. When he approached me (Rochambeau) he presented his sword. I pointed to General Washington opposite to me as the head of the American army, and said to him that as the French army was an auxiliary on this continent, that it was now from the American general that he must take orders."

The manner of the capitulation was modeled on the harsh terms Cornwallis had imposed on General Lincoln at the siege of Charleston, the previous year. The colors were cased. The defeated army was not permitted to play an American or French tune, and it was to Lincoln himself that the formal surrender was made.

In his general orders of the 20th Washington congratulated the army on the glorious events of the day previous, and expressed his warm gratitude to the French king and his officers, naming each in his orders with suitable phrase and commendation, and requested the Count de Rochambeau "to present in his name to the regiments of Agenois and Deux-Ponts the two pieces of brass ordnance captured by them (as a testimony of their gallantry) in storming the enemy's redoubt on the night of the 14th inst., when officers and men so universally vied with each other in the exercise of every soldierly virtue."

The victors found the little town of York, which at that time contained about sixty houses in a state of absolute dilapidation. They were literally honeycombed by balls. The British officers complimented the French on the precision of their fire, and confessed that they were the first artillerymen in Europe, while the French were equally amazed at the wonderful proficiency the Americans had acquired with their limited experience. The house of Secretary Nelson of Virginia, which had served as Cornwallis' headquarters, and the most stately building in the town, remained for years a significant witness of the accuracy of the fire of the allies.

This rare specimen of architecture, built in

GRACE CHURCH AT YORKTOWN

In 1881 a centennial celebration of the victory over Cornwallis was held at Yorktown and the cornerstone of the national monument was laid with elaborate ceremonies in the presence of a great concourse of people. On the base of the monument the following inscription is engraved: "At York on October 19, 1781, after a siege of nineteen days, by 5,600 Americans and 7,000 French troops of the line, 3,500 Virginia militia under command of General Thomas Nelson and 36 French ships of war, Earl Cornwallis, commander of the British force at York and Gloucester, surrendered his army, 7,251 officers and men, 840 seamen, 244 cannon and 24 standards, to his excellency, George Washington, commander-in-chief of the combined forces of American and France; to his excellency, the Comte de Rochambeau, commanding the auxiliary troops of his most Christian majesty in America and to his excellency, the Comte de Grasse, commanding in chief the naval army of France in Chesapeake."

Grace church, which figured prominently in the historic events just related, is still used as a place of worship. The edifice is of masonry construction and was built in 1700. The old bell was a gift from Queen Anne in 1725. The original communion service is still in use. Curiously carved designs of a head and a lion are easily discernable, but the emblems on the service are indistinct. On the quaint tombstones in the churchyard are the names of many of the famous Nelson family.

The oldest custom house in the United States is situated at Yorktown and is one of the most interesting of the historic buildings. It was built in 1781 and was the port of entry for New York, Philadelphia and many other of our great cities when they were in their infancy. Yorktown was also the scene of considerable activity at one period during the Civil war. When General McClellan began the Peninsula campaign April 4, 1862, he found Yorktown fortified and a line drawn from the town across the peninsula to the mouth of the Warwick river. Gen. J. B. Magruder, in command of the Confederate forces, had hardly more than 11,000 men in all, of whom 5,000 were at Yorktown. General McClellan, who very much overestimated the Confederate forces, awaited reinforcements and began siege operations. At the end of the month McClellan had in position 115,000 men while Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, who had assumed command of the Confederate forces on April 17, had hardly more than 50,000 men on the peninsula. Just as McClellan was ready to open fire, General Johnston withdrew May 3. His rear guard was overtaken near Williamsburg on May 5, and an indecisive battle was fought.

Yorktown is the county seat of York county, Virginia, and is situated about 70 miles southeast of Richmond, on the York river. Although one of the oldest and most historic towns in the country, Yorktown has never attained the prominence and importance commercially that its founders had prophesied for it, and today it has a population of but a few hundred.

Dew Ponds in Great Britain.

Among the most singular archaeological remains found in Great Britain are the ancient dew ponds, the construction of which is ascribed to the neolithic age. The purpose of these ponds was to furnish drinking water for cattle. An exposed position where springs were absent was selected and a broad, hollowed surface was formed and covered over with straw or some other non-conducting material. Above was spread a thick layer of clay strewn with stones. During the night the cold surface of the clay caused an abundance of moisture to condense from lower layers of the air. Some of these ancient dew ponds are still working.

When to Relax.

Dr. Eugenia Hancock of New York says a woman should "positively relax during the noon hour." With the children demanding lunch, the telephone ringing, the grocery boy at the back door and an Armenian lace peddler at the front, not to mention the neighbor running in to borrow the lawn mower, this is very easy, of course.

AND MY WIFE, ROSIE, TOO

Bridegroom Who Had Forgotten to Register His New Better Half Quickly Makes Amends.

In spick and span raiment, carrying each a new suit case and a timid expression, they entered the Hotel Narragansett and inquired the way unessarily to the desk, says the Providence Journal.

Spying a kernel of rice on the youth's hat brim, the clerk smiled covertly, whirled the register with an encouraging flourish and placed the inked pen in the nervous hand.

"John B., New Bedford, Mass.," wrote the youth, pushed back his hat, upset the kernel of rice and wiped his beaded brow.

"But, er—the lady?" inquired the clerk soothingly.

"She's my wife," quoth the youth, straightening up, bristling.

"She ought to be registered," advised the clerk thoughtfully.

"Ain't you put me down?" the lady murmured, looking over the youth's shoulder.

"O, sure, I—I forgot. Gimme the pen," said the youth, quickly.

"Whereupon he smiled and wrote:
"And my wife, Rosie."

SYNOPSIS.

Jack Keith, a Virginian, now a border plainsman, is riding along the Santa Fe trail on the lookout for roaming parties of savages. He notices a camp fire at a distance and then sees a team attached to a wagon and at full gallop pursued by men on ponies. When Keith reaches the wagon the raiders have massacred two men and departed. He searches the victims' pockets and finds a locket with a woman's portrait. He resolves to hunt down the murderers. Keith is arrested at Carson City, charged with the murder, his accuser being a ruffian named Black Bart. He goes to jail fully realizing the peril of swift border justice. A companion in his cell is a negro, who tells him he is a brother who has been in the army. A Mr. Hawley induced her to come to the cabin while he sought to locate her brother. Hawley appears, and Keith in hiding recognizes him as Black Bart. Hawley tries to make love to the girl. There is a terrific battle in the deserted room in which Keith overcomes Black Bart. Hawley is appropriated, and the girl who says that her name is Hope, joins in the escape.

CHAPTER XII.—(Continued.)

"No; I have ridden this country for years, and there is no ranch pasturing cattle along the Salt Fork. Miss Hope, I want you to comprehend what it is you have escaped from; what you are now fleeing from. Within the last two years an apparently organized body of outlaws have been operating throughout this entire region. Oftentimes disguised as Indians, they have terrorized the Santa Fe trail for two hundred miles, killing travelers in small parties, and driving off stock. There are few ranches as far west as this, but these have all suffered from raids. These fellows have done more to precipitate the present Indian war than any act of the savages. They have endeavored to make the authorities believe that Indians were guilty of their deeds of murder and robbery. Both troops and volunteers have tried to hold the gang up, but they scatter and disappear, as though swallowed by the desert. I have been out twice, hard on their trail, only to come back baffled. Now, I think accident has given me the clue."

She straightened up; glancing questioningly at him through the darkness.

"This is what I mean, Miss Hope. I suspect that cabin to be the rendezvous of those fellows, and I half believe Hawley to be their leader."

"Then you will report all this to the authorities?"

He smiled grimly, his lips compressed.

"I hardly think so; at least, not for the present. I am not blood-thirsty, or enamored of man-hunting, but I happen to have a personal interest in this particular affair which I should prefer to settle alone." He paused, swiftly reviewing the circumstances of their short acquaintance, and as suddenly determined to trust her discretion. Deep down in his heart he rather wanted her to know. "The fact of the matter is, that Neb and I here were the ones that particular posse were trailing."

"You!" her voice faltered. "He said those men were under arrest for murder, and had broken jail."

"He also said it was easy to convict men in this country if you only knew how. It is true we broke jail, but only in order to save our lives; it was the only way. Technically, we are outlaws, and now run the risk of immediate re-arrest by returning north of the Arkansas. We came to you fugitives; I was charged with murder, the negro with assault. So, you see, Miss Hope, the desperate class of men you are now associating with."

The slight bitterness in his tone stung the girl into resentment. She was looking straight at him, but in the gloom he could not discern the expression of her eyes.

"I don't believe it," she exclaimed decisively, "you—you do not look like that!"

"My appearance may be sufficient to convince you," he returned, rather dryly, "but would weigh little before a Western court. Unfortunately, the evidence was strong against me; or would have been had the case ever come to a trial. The strange thing about it was that both warrants were sworn out by the same complainant, and apparently for a similar purpose—'Black Bart' Hawley."

"What purpose?"

"To keep us from telling what we knew regarding a certain crime, in which either he, or some of his intimate friends, were deeply interested."

"But it would all come out at the trial, wouldn't it?"

"There was to be no trial. Judge Lynch settles the majority of such cases out here at present. It is extremely simple. Listen, and I will tell you the story."

He reviewed briefly those occurrences leading directly up to his arrest, saying little regarding the horrors of that scene witnessed near the Cimmaron Crossing, but making sufficiently clear his very slight connection with it, and the reason those who were guilty of the crime were so anxious to get him out of the way. She listened intently, asking few questions, until he ended. Then they both looked up, conscious that dawn was becoming gray in the east. Keith's first thought was one of relief—the bright sky showed him they were riding straight north.

"I don't believe it—you—you do not look like that," she exclaimed.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Ford of the Arkansas.

They were still in the midst of the yellow featureless plain, but the weary horses had slowed down to a walk, the heavy sand retarding progress. It was a gloomy, depressing scene in the spectral gray light, a wide circle of intense loneliness, unbroken by either dwarfed shrub or bunch of grass, a barren expanse stretching to the sky. Vague cloud shadows seemed to flit across the level surface, assuming fantastic shapes, but all of the same dull coloring. Imperfect and unfinished. Nothing seemed tangible or real, but rather some grotesque picture of delirium, ever merging into another yet more hideous. The very silence of those surrounding wastes seemed burdensome, adding immeasurably to the horror. They were but specks crawling underneath the sky—the only living, moving objects in all that immense circle of desolation and death.

Keith turned in his saddle, looking back past Neb—who swayed in his seat, with head lolled on his breast as though asleep, his horse plodding after the others—along the slight trail they had made across the desert. So far as eye could reach nothing moved, nothing apparently existed. Fronting again to the north he looked upon the same grim barrenness, only that far off, against the lighter background of distant sky, there was visible a faint blur, a bluish haze, which he believed to be the distant sand dunes bordering the Arkansas. The intense dreariness of it all left a feeling of depression. His eyes turned and regarded the girl riding silently beside him. The same look of depression was visible upon her face, and she was gazing off into the dull distance with lack-luster eyes, her slender form leaning forward, her hands clasped across the pommel. The long weariness of the night had left traces on her young face, robbing it of some of its freshness, yet Keith found it more attractive in the growing daylight than amid the lamp shadows of the evening before. He had not previously realized the peculiar clearness of her complexion, the rose tint showing through the olive skin, or the soft and silky fineness of her hair, which, disarranged, was strangely becoming under the broad brim of the hat she wore, drawn low until it shadowed her eyes. It was not a face to be easily associated with frontier conceit, or any surrender to coquetry; the chin round and firm, the lips full, yet sufficiently compressed; the whole expression that of pure and dignified womanhood. She puzzled him, and he scarcely knew what to believe, or exactly how to act toward her.

"Our friends back yonder should be turning out from the corral by now," he said finally, anxious to break the silence, for she had not spoken since he ended his tale. "It will not be long until they discover Hawley's predicament, and perhaps the welkin already rings with profanity. That may even account for the blue haze out yonder."

She turned her eyes toward him, and the slightest trace of a smile appeared from out of the depths of their weariness.

"If they would only remain satisfied with that. Will they follow us, do you think? And are we far enough away by this time to be safe?"

"It is hardly likely they will let us escape without a chase," he answered slowly. "We possess too much information now that we have their rendezvous located, and 'Black Bart' will have a private grudge to revenge. I wonder if he suspects who attacked him! But don't worry, Miss Hope; we have miles the start, and the wind has been strong enough to cover our trail. Do you see that dark irregularity ahead?"

"Yes; is it a cloud?"

"No; the Arkansas sand dunes. I am going to try to keep the horses moving until we arrive there. Then we will halt and eat whatever Neb has packed behind him, and rest for an hour or two. You look very tired, but I hope you can keep up for that distance. We shall be safely out of sight then."

"Indeed, I am tired; the strain of waiting alone in that cabin, and all that happened last night, have tried me severely. But—but I can go through."

Her voice proved her weakness, although it was determined enough, and Keith, yielding to sudden impulse, put out his hand, and permitted it to rest upon hers, clasped across the pommel. Her eyes dropped, but there was no change of posture.

"Your nerve is all right," he said, admiringly, "you have shown yourself a brave girl."

"I could not be a coward, and be my father's daughter," she replied, with an odd accent of pride in her choking voice, "but I have been afraid, and—and I am still."

"Of what? Surely, not that those fellows will ever catch up with us?"

"No, I hardly know what, only there is a dread I cannot seem to shake off, as if some evil impended, the coming of which I can feel, but not see. Have you ever experienced any such premonition?"

He laughed, withdrawing his hand.

"I think not. I am far too prosaic to allow myself to dream to worry me. So far I have discovered sufficient trouble in real life to keep my brain active. Even now I cannot forget how hungry I am."

She did not answer, comprehending how useless it would be to explain, and a little ashamed of her own ill-defined fears, and thus they rode on in silence. He did not notice that she glanced aside at him shyly, marking the outline of his clear-cut features, it was a manly face, strong, alive, full of character, the well-shaped head firmly poised, the broad shoulders squared in spite of the long night of weary exertion. The depths of her eyes brightened with appreciation.

"I believe your story, Mr. Keith," she said at last softly.

"My story?" questioning, and turning instantly toward her.

"Yes; all that you have told me about what happened."

"Oh; I had almost forgotten having told it, but I never felt any doubt but what you would believe. I don't think I could lie to you."

It was no compliment, but spoken with such evident honesty that her eyes met his with frankness.

"There could be no necessity; only I wanted you to know that I trust you, and am grateful."

She extended her hand this time, and he took it within his own, holding it firmly, yet without knowing what to answer. There was strong impulse within him to question her, to learn then and there her own life story. Yet, somehow, the reticence of the girl restrained him; he could not deliberately probe beneath the veil she kept lowered between them. Until she chose to lift it herself voluntarily, he possessed no right to intrude. The gentlemanly instincts of younger years held him silent, realizing clearly that whatever secret might dominate her life, it was hers to conceal just so long as she pleased. Out of this swift struggle of repression he managed to say:

"I appreciate your confidence, and mean to prove worthy. Perhaps some day I can bring you the proofs."

"I need none other than your own word."

"Oh, but possibly you are too easily convinced; you believed in Hawley."

She looked at him searchingly, her eyes glowing, her cheeks flushed.

"Yes," she said slowly, convincingly. "I know I did; I—I was so anxious to be helped, but—but this is different."

ALAS! THE POOR DUCHESS

She Thought Wealthy Couple Were Making Sport of Her Wedding Present.

Recently, when the wealthy Mrs. de R. was to be married, one of our good duchesses had to make her a present, just a little present. The duchess thought it would be useless to expend much money for a person so rich. She thought if she would look through her vast mansion she would be able to find something, some trinket, to which the addition of her card would give sufficient glory. She finally found in her writing desk an insignificant cameo that she had once worn.

The following day she received from her young friend a letter of enthusiastic thanks: "Oh, you have been very foolish! This is too, too beautiful," etc.

"She is making sport of my little present," thought the good duchess. Then came a second letter, this time from the husband who was to be: "How can we thank you? We are delighted. This will spoil us."

"The impertinent fellow," said the duchess, "he wants me to understand that I have been niggardly."

Nevertheless she went to pay a visit to the R.'s before the marriage. There in the midst of the presents, exposed in a most prominent place, she saw the little cameo placed upon her card. An old gentleman approached her. He was a member of the Academy of Inscriptions and Belles-Lettres.

"What a wonderful present you have given these children, Madame la duchesse," he said. "For forty years we have been seeking for this very cameo. It is of the era of Trojan, and this trinket is valued at two hundred thousand francs."

Alas, the poor duchess.—Le Cri de Paris.

A great institution in embryo is the remarkable Emanuel college at Saskatoon, in the diocese of Saskatchewan.

At the present time sixty young men are being trained there under Principal Lloyd to meet the rapidly growing demand for young clergymen in the vast territory of western Canada.

A picture of this college shows a lot of wooden huts of the simplest species, standing on the open prairie. Two tutors live in shacks also.

TAFT HAS HARD TRIP

PRESIDENTIAL PARTY NARROWLY ESCAPES SPENDING NIGHT ON MOUNT RAINIER.

AUTO RUNS INTO QUAGMIRE

Forest Rangers Give Assistance, But Four Cars Are Abandoned Because of Bad Condition of Roads.

Tacoma, Wash.—President Taft climbed up to the foot of the glaciers on Mount Rainier and narrowly escaped spending the night in the mountain fastness.

The presidential party made the ascent in automobiles, and when nearing the highest point reached by the roadway some of the machines became mired in the mud up to the hubs of the wheels.

Night had fallen and a storm threatened as the president started down the decline. With searchlights blazing the way, the president's car slowly crept along the edge of precipices, and at times the outer wheels were within two feet of a sheer drop of 1,000 feet or more.

The first sixty miles of the trip were made over smooth roads. On the inside of Mount Rainier national park, however, the party found the roads wet and heavy. And as they proceeded the highway became almost a quagmire. Finally several automobiles became mired and with their own power could go no farther.

The president's car was in advance of these, and managed to pass through even the worst parts of the road. The president passed on up to the snow line.

In the meantime forest rangers had pulled several of the stalled automobiles from the mire, and they were turned back for the return trip before the president's car reached them on its downward trip.

The president's car sank deep in the muddy ruts in the road, and skidded badly at times, despite the safety chains that had been thrown over the car tires.

The president completed the journey as planned and arrived safely at his train, which had been taken to Ashford, near the mountain, and passed through here en route to Bellingham.

Bellingham, Wash.—President Taft in a speech here predicted that the Panama canal would be ready for use on July 1, 1913.

"The canal," he said, "is the greatest constructive work since the Christian era."

"If nothing untoward happens you can count on that canal on July 1, 1913. It's been promised for July 1, 1913, but I'll let you into the little secret when I tell you, you may see the first ship go through the canal on July 1, 1913."

Leaving here, President Taft struck south again on the homeward leg of his long trip. From Bellingham the president goes back to the capital by way of Oregon and California, with a run north from Salt Lake City into Montana, the middle northwest, but according to existing arrangements the westward part of the "voyage" is over.

In Bed Seven Weeks With Terrible Kidney Trouble.

A. Dearth, Main St., Camden, O., says: "I was in bed seven weeks with kidney trouble and grew worse in spite of all the doctor could do. Kidney secretions were in terrible condition. If left standing they thickened like glue and had to be removed with a knife. My own doctor gave me up. I then called in a specialist who said I was beyond recovery. I had lost over 20 pounds and was but a shadow of my former self. I used one box of Doan's Kidney Pills and soon felt better. Continuing, I was cured and have not had the slightest trouble since."

RASH ALL OVER BABY'S BODY

Itched So He Could Not Sleep

"On July 27, 1909, we left Boston for a trip to England and Ireland, taking baby with us. After being in Ireland a few days a nasty rash came out all over his body. We took him to a doctor who gave us medicine for him. The trouble started in the form of a rash and was all over baby's body, head and face, at different times. It irritated, and he would scratch it with all his might. The consequence was it developed into sores, and we were afraid it would leave nasty scars on his face."

"When we reached England we took baby to another doctor, who said his condition was due to change of food and climate, and gave more medicine. The rash got no better, and it used to itch and burn at night so bad that the child could not sleep. He was completely covered with it at different times. It was at this time that my mother advised us to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for about nine months the places disappeared. There are not any scars, and baby is completely cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. We have no further trouble with baby's skin. Nothing stopped the itching, and allowed baby to sleep but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. Margaret Gunn, 29 Burrell St., Roxbury, Mass., March 12, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to Cuticura, Dept. 14 K, Boston.

Circumstantial Evidence.

A Scotchman and his wife were visiting in a wild, beautiful part of the country. While driving one day with their host, the two men sitting together in the front seat while the lady sat behind, they crossed a high bridge which spanned a roaring torrent. An unusually loud splash caught the gentlemen's attention for a moment, but nothing was said. After several miles the gentleman turned to address a remark to his wife, but her seat was empty.

"Aye," he remarked to his host, "that will be your splash we heard."—Housekeeper.

NURSE'S STORY OF ULCER CURE

Case of Six Months' Standing Entirely Healed.

After long suffering and the use of many ineffectual medicines, this case from Augusta, Me., comes to light as entirely healed. The authenticity of the case is apparent when you appreciate that the bearer of the tale is a graduate nurse. The following is the letter, as received:

"I must write and tell you the good Resinol Ointment has done. I applied it to an ulcerated leg of six months' standing. Almost everything had been tried to heal it. Resinol was applied twice a day for four weeks, and the ulcers are entirely healed. It is now six months since the treatment and no indication of a return of the trouble. I have used Resinol for eruptions on children's faces, and for everything that seemed to need an ointment, with satisfactory results in every case."

Mrs. I. E. CAMERON, Augusta, Me. The first application of Resinol will relieve itching and irritation in skin diseases, and stop pain in burns and scalds. Frequently chafing, sunburn and poison ivy eruptions are cured overnight.

It is highly beneficial as a general skin remedy, and after one trial you will appreciate this to such an extent that you will never be without it. You can procure Resinol Ointment, Resinol Soap and Resinol Medicated Shaving Stick from any druggist. Sample sent free if you will mention Department No. 59. Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

"Doctor," said the nervous man, "is there any way of teaching a person to talk in his sleep?"

"I never heard of any," replied the physician. "How could such an accomplishment be of benefit?"

"It's either that or insomnia for me. My wife is one of the best suffragette speakers before the public. She always rehearses her orations at home, and I've got to say 'hear! hear!' or 'that's the stuff!' at least once every ten minutes."—Washington Star.

"Did I understand you to say, sir," said Colonel Stillwell, "that you regarded that orator's remarks as moonshine?"

"That's what I said," replied the critical person.

A FINE NIGHT-CAP

The Best Thing in the World to Go to Bed and Sleep On.

"My wife and I find that a teaspoonful of Grape-Nuts and a cup of hot milk, or some cream, with it, makes the finest night-cap in the world," says an Allegheny, Pa., man.

"We go to sleep as soon as we strike the bed, and slumber like babies till rising time in the morning."

"It is about 3 years now since we began to use Grape-Nuts food, and we always have it for breakfast and before retiring and sometimes for lunch. I was so sick from what the doctors called acute indigestion and brain tag before I began to use Grape-Nuts that I could neither eat, sleep nor work with any comfort."

"I was afflicted at the same time with the most intense pains, accompanied by a racking headache and backache, every time I tried to eat anything. Notwithstanding an unusual pressure from my professional duties, I was compelled for a time to give up my work altogether."

"Then I put myself on a diet of Grape-Nuts and cream alone, with an occasional cup of Postum as a runner-up, and sometimes a little dry toast. I assure you that in less than a week I felt like a new man; I had gained six pounds in weight, could sleep well and think well."

"The good work went on, and I was soon ready to return to business, and have been hard at it, and enjoying it ever since."

"Command me at any time any one enquires as to the merits of Grape-Nuts. As will find me always ready to testify." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

BERLIN WINS RACE

GERMAN BALLOON LANDS NEAR HOLCOMB, WIS., AFTER MAKING PERILOUS THIP.

IS SWEEPED TO EARTH BY GALE

Victorious Aeronauts in Flight For Bennett Cup Descend in Forest Almost Exhausted From Rain, Cold, Hunger and Loss of Sleep.

Holcombe, Wis.—Lieut. Hans Gericke and J. Otto Dunker, pilot and assistant respectively, of the German balloon Berlin II, arrived here victors in the international balloon race in an exhausted condition after a perilous battle with a gale that raged for forty hours. They had been given up for lost by the Kansas City Aero club.

Caught in the storm almost as soon as it ascended in Kansas City, the Berlin II dashed to the northeast with the speed of an aeroplane. Many times the huge gas bag began to sink. Sand, provisions, water, everything was tossed from the basket to keep it afloat. Rain fell in torrents and the pilot and his aide were drenched to the skin. As they hastened north the weather, too, became bitterly cold. Hunger and lack of sleep added to their suffering.

Finally the Berlin II refused longer to remain in the air and sank into a forest 12 miles north of Holcombe. Here in a strange country and without a guide Lieutenant Gericke and Herr Dunker were lost, struggling without food for 24 hours before they arrived at this town.

In its flight the Berlin II covered 450 miles, carrying off the Bennett trophy.

The Buckeye, one of the American entrants, which came down at La Crosse, Wis., was second with a distance of 365 miles.

DEFECT CAUSED FLOOD

CITY DIKE BLAMED FOR BLACK RIVER FALLS DELUGE.

Families Homeless and Food Supply Exhausted—High Water Receding—Looters at Work.

La Crosse, Wis.—Fifteen families are homeless, property loss of $1,200,000 has been wrought, and the city of Black River Falls is laboring under the handicap of the loss of its business district as the result of the flood.

This, in brief, summarizes the situation in Black River Falls disclosed at the end of an exhaustive canvass of the city.

The defective construction of the municipal power plant at Black River Falls—not the Hatfield dam—is held by engineers to be partly responsible for the disaster.

The concrete dike of the city dam, just completed, was laid diagonally to the course of the river instead of at right angles, throwing the flood waters toward the business section when the torrent was released. Had the protection dike been built across to the side bank the eddy through which the flood got its first opening into the bank where the business section was located would not have existed.

Two companies of state militia are guarding the stricken city against looters who already had begun their work.

The waters are receding, but it is likely there are many buildings which are still standing which will have to be condemned, as they overhang the water. The water below Black River Falls is still rising and between Lytle and Marshland on the Northwestern road a mile and a half of track was washed out, tying up traffic.

A serious problem is the lack of stores and loss of stock and provisions. Only one grocery remains in the city. Meats and groceries will have to be shipped in from outside points for the present to supply the population.

A Reader Cures His Constipation—Try It Free

Simple Way for Any Family to Retain the Good Health of All Its Members.

The editors of "Health Hints" and "Questions and Answers" have one question that is put to them more often than any other, and which, strangely enough, they find the most difficult to answer. That is "How can I cure my constipation?"

Dr. Caldwell, an eminent specialist in diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels, has looked the whole field over and has convinced that the ingredients contained in what is called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, has the best claim to attention from constipated people.

Its success in the cure of stubborn constipation has done much to displace the use of salts, waters, strong cathartics and such things. Syrup Pepsin, by training the stomach and bowel muscles to again do their work naturally, and with its tonic ingredients, strengthening the nerves, brings about a lasting cure.

Among its strongest supporters are Mr. John Graveline of 38 Milwaukee Ave., Detroit, Mich., Mr. J. A. Vernon of Oklahoma City and thousands of others. It can be obtained at any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, or if you want to try it first a free sample bottle can be obtained by writing the doctor.
